Brussel Sprouts

This cabbage family member is high in potassium, carotenoids, vitamin B6, and folate, all of which contribute to heart health. Brussels sprouts also top the charts for soluble fiber, packing 2 grams per 1/2-cup serving. According to a 19-year survey that examined the effects of fiber intake on heart attacks in about 10,000 adults, those who ate the most soluble fiber had a 12 percent reduction in coronary heart disease events. Soluble fiber also slows digestion and absorption of carbohydrates, giving rise to lower and more stable blood glucose and insulin levels, which is good for your metabolism and your arteries.

Look for bright green sprouts with compact heads. To maximize their nutritional benefits, don't overcook them: opt for a quick sauté, or steam for 5 minutes and toss with lemon juice, olive oil, garlic, salt, and pepper.

Final Numbers for Books

All books for the 2014 book drive have been collected, stamped with the MARSP label, and delivered to the recipients. And the final count for the year is 5,000 plus. That's right. Over 5,000 books have been delivered to various organizations in Midland who work with children. Some of the recipients are Midland Family Care, Fair Havens, Inc., Friends of the Library, Coleman High School Preschool, Family Promise, Safe Place, Blessings from Heaven Learning Center, Breaking Bread, YMCA, Amos, Buckner Family Place, High Sky Children's Home, Rainbow Christian Day Care and Midland Boys and Girls Club.

Thanks to each and every one of you who cleaned closets, went to garage sales, and bugged your friends and neighbors to find books. This is such a worthy cause, and it is truly a satisfying feeling to be able to give books to children who might not otherwise have them.

Now we start again. We need new and gently used children's books. Let's not rest on our laurels.

Thank you very much.

Alert!! Possible Scam

The following was received by Maridell Fryar. Please read it carefully and be alert about possible scams.

Local Presidents & Committee Chairs,

Anita Palmer [TRS Board member] called me this afternoon. She indicated that a member of the Wichita Falls TRTA was contacted by an individual desiring to come to her home and sell her a Diamond Plus TRTA Membership. Anita has alerted Tim Lee and Bill Barnes regarding this issue. They informed her that NO ONE representing TRTA has been authorized to contact any TRTA member regarding Diamond Plus. Anita also indicated that all pertinent information about their local was known by the contacting parties.

Our concern is to alert our local units and inform them that this is not the practice used to promote Diamond Plus. Diamond Plus is promoted from within TRTA with no solicitation from an outside group of individuals. If your local is contacted, please alert Tim Lee at TRTA, Anita Palmer or [your local president].

Thanks for all that you do for TRTA.

Respectfully, Dale Thomas

Cook with These 3 Spices for Optimal Health

Vindaloo pork, made with the world's hottest pepper -- bhut jolokia or ghost pepper -- may thrill the Food Channel's Heat Seekers, Aaron Sanchez and Roger Mooking. But such super-fiery dishes scare scores of North Americans away from Indian cuisine and that's a shame. Spiciness is the heart of Indian cooking, not heat (though that's there too), and those spices deliver incredible flavors and powerful health-enhancing benefits. So, spice up your new year and lower your risk of everything from Alzheimer's to irritable bowel syndrome with this trio.

Fenugreek: This plant's aromatic seeds are ground into soups, veggies, stews, and curries. Fenugreek has been shown to help control blood glucose levels and is advocated to aid breastfeeding and lower bad LDL cholesterol.

Cumin: Often used to ease gassiness, it's most potent as black cumin seed oil. It's said to be an immune system modulator and cancer fighter. Sprinkle the ground seeds in chili, b-b-q sauce, and on veggies. Along with turmeric, it helps boost memory-enhancing proteins that nurture your brain's neurons.

Turmeric: A dried root used in yellow mustard (Dr. Mike loves it in a marinade for grilled salmon), turmeric eases inflammation of osteoarthritis and ulcerative colitis (when used with conventional medications). Curcumin -- not to be confused with cumin -- is the active ingredient in the turmeric root. Try 1/4 teaspoon several times a day sprinkled in food.

Curry powder: Grind those three spices together with coriander seeds, bay leaf, mustard seed, cinnamon, and cloves; use in place of salt and pepper. Wow!

Plantar Fasciitis

Plantar fasciitis is inflammation of the thick tissue on the bottom of the foot. This tissue is called the plantar fascia. It connects the heel bone to the toes and creates the arch of the foot.

Causes, incidence, and risk factors

Plantar fasciitis occurs when the thick band of tissue on the bottom of the foot is overstretched or overused. This can be painful and make walking more difficult.

You are more likely to get plantar fasciitis if you have:

Foot arch problems (both flat feet and high arches)

- Long-distance running, especially running downhill or on uneven surfaces
- Sudden weight gain or obesity
- Tight Achilles tendon (the tendon connects the calf muscles to heel)
- Shoes with poor arch support or soft soles

Plantar fasciitis is seen in both men and women. However, it most often affects active men ages 40 - 70. It is one of the most common orthopedic complaints relating to the foot. Plantar fasciitis is commonly thought of as being caused by a heel spur, but research has found that this is not the case. On x-ray, heel spurs are seen in people with and without plantar fasciitis.

Symptoms

The most common complaint is pain and stiffness in the bottom of the heel. The heel pain may be dull or sharp. The bottom of the foot may also ache or burn. The pain may develop slowly over time, or suddenly after intense activity.

Treatment

Your health care provider will usually first recommend:

acetaminophen (Tylenol) or ibuprofen (Advil, Motrin) to reduce pain & inflammation

- Heel and foot stretching exercises
- Night splints to wear while sleeping to stretch the foot
- Resting as much as possible for at least a week
- Wearing shoes with good support and cushions

Other steps to relieve pain include:

- Apply ice to the painful area. Do this at least twice a day for 10 - 15 minutes, more often in the first couple of days.
- Try wearing a heel cup, felt pads in the heel area, or shoe inserts.
- Use night splints to stretch the injured fascia and allow it to heal.

If these treatments do not work, your health care provider may recommend:

- Wearing a boot cast, which looks like a ski boot, for 3-6 weeks. Remove for bathing.
- Custom-made shoe inserts (orthotics)
- Steroid shots or injections into the heel

Sometimes, foot surgery is needed.

Expectations (prognosis)

Nonsurgical treatments almost always improve the pain. Treatment can last from several months to 2 years before symptoms get better. Most patients feel better in 9 months. Some people need surgery to relieve the pain.

Calling your health care provider Contact your health care provider if you have symptoms of plantar fasciitis.

Prevention Making sure your ankle, Achilles tendon, and calf muscles are flexible can help prevent plantar fasciitis.
